RHDG to bring CITRIS website into the future

April 2010

The Center for Information Technology Research in the Interest of Society (CITRIS) has awarded the development and design of their website to Riezebos Holzbaur Group (RHDG).

CITRIS creates information technology solutions for many of societies' most pressing social, environmental, and health care problems. The first public-private partnership of its kind, CITRIS leverages the resources of four UC campuses; Berkeley, Davis, Merced, and Santa Cruz, corporate partners, and government to develop and apply technologies in the interest of society.

RHDG will be involved in the structural and creative development of the new CITRIS website. The website will draw a diverse audience from various different sources - serving as the center's main communication tool, and will be designed to foster exploration, encourage funding, and reinforce CITRIS's core message of collaboration.

RHDG looks forward to creating a unique and visually compelling online experience for CITRIS that will engage and inform its audience.
